Copyright and dual submission policies

To those who are considering submitting a paper to the Japan Institute of Marine Engineering

We would like to thank you for considering submitting a paper to the Japan Institute of Marine Engineering. We have the following copyright and dual submission policies for authors considering such submissions. We would appreciate for your understanding and observance of the policies mentioned below.

1. Copyrights

All types of papers to be submitted to the Japan Institute of Marine Engineering shall be original, previously unpublished in any type of publication. If contents identical to the submitted paper are submitted to other publications by the same author or one or more co-author(s), we define them as a dual submission. The authors are responsible for ensuring that the paper they plan to submit to the Japan Institute of Marine Engineering’s publications does not represent a dual submission.

2. Dual submissions

2.1 Prohibiting dual submissions

a) When the authors submit a paper, they must guarantee the originality of their work. Contents already published in other academic publications are not deemed original and treated as dual submissions even if they include some additions and changes.

b) The authors can quote or reproduce elements already published (or to be published) in other academic publications for their papers in accordance with Article 32 ‘Quotation’ of the Copyright Law of Japan. (Please refer to 2.3 Quotation)

c) We define ‘other academic publications’ as those carry papers that are selected by an examining body and are made available through ordinary means. Even if they do not take the form of printed materials and are available online only, they are defined as part of this category.

d) Even when submitting a document other than papers, such as a manuscript, the authors must guarantee the originality of their work. When the authors use part of articles in other publications for their documents or reproduce them in their work, they must meet requirements for ‘Quotation’ of the Copyright Law of Japan or obtain permission in advance from the copyright holder. Even if the authors quote their own papers, they need to obtain permission to reproduce them.
2.2 What is acceptable / unacceptable?

a) Acceptable (those which are not defined as dual submissions)

- A paper that is based on an abstract published in the Japan Institute of Marine Engineering’s publications
- A paper delivered at an international conference (when it is distributed in the form of a collection of papers to conference participants only)

b) Unacceptable (those which are defined as dual submissions)

- A paper published as a publicly available document in an in-house newsletter
- A paper already published in other academic documents with new findings, data and analyses incorporated
- A Japanese translation of a paper already published in English academic journals or an English translation of a paper already published in Japanese academic journals
- A paper delivered at an international conference (when it is available online in the form of a collection of papers about the conference)

2.3 Quotation

When satisfying the following requirements, the authors can quote or reproduce part of documents in other publications in their papers. The authors do not need to obtain permission from the copyright holder when they meet the conditions for ‘Quotation’ stipulated by Article 32 of the Copyright Law of Japan.

a) Conditions for quotes

- When the authors quote copyrighted materials, these materials shall be ones which have already been published.
- When the authors introduce quotes, they shall have a compelling reason to do so.
- The authors shall ensure that parts to be quoted are easily recognizable with brackets etc.
- The authors shall attribute quotes.
- The authors shall not violate the moral rights of copyright holders.
- The authors shall use quotes in an appropriate manner.
  - The authors shall not use quotes more than twice for each paper.
  - The authors shall ensure that quotes play a supporting role only in their papers.
- When the authors source charts and diagrams from copyrighted work for their papers, they shall modify these charts and diagrams for their use and clarify that they are a product of the original sources modified by the authors.
- Materials produced and publicly disclosed by the central government, local municipalities and incorporated administrative agencies
  In the case of materials which public entities, including the central government, local municipalities and incorporated administrative agencies, produce and publicly disclose for wider use by the general public (such as official PR materials, data, statistics and reports), the authors can use them without seeking permission from these entities unless there is a clear statement in these materials saying that they shall not be reproduced.

2.4 Other

   a) Quotation from copyrighted materials published overseas

The authors need to meet copyright requirements in the country concerned. However, generally speaking, Japan’s Copyright Law satisfies copyright requirements described in international treaties and agreements as well as in almost all of the global treaties and regulations. Therefore, if the authors meet conditions described in the domestic law, it is very likely that they will not cause any copyright related problems.
